Cursor's Fury: The Codex Alera: Book Three by Jim Butcher ...

The Codex Alera series are Jim Butcher's best work, in my opinion. Unlike his Dresden Files, the Alera books have a defined beginning, middle and ending and they work really well. And to think, the series was born as a challenge Butcher accepted from a fan to create a fantasy book that married "The Roman Legion" and "Pokémon"...

Two years have passed after the Night of the Red Stars and the Battle at the Elinarch (in book three of the Codex Alera, Cursor's Fury). Rufus Scipio/Tavi had been repelling attacks from the Canim forces for two years and the war against Kalare raged on. Senator Arnos, who is in charge of the war committee, is pushing for the destruction of all of the Canim forces in Alera.

Captain's Fury - Wikipedia

"Cursor's Fury" is the third in Butcher's "Codex Alera" series. As with the previous book, Butcher picks up the story after two years of story time has passed. In just about every aspect, this book continues with, works on, and improves the material from the previous books: if you liked them, you'll love this one.

While the first book Furies of Calderon (Codex Alera, Book 1)introduced us to most of the key Characters and the second Academ's Fury (Codex Alera, Book 2)established these characters substance, the third book was the most relateable due to Tavi's age and growing wisdom. He is coming to terms with what he thinks he is or isnt and whats going on around him.
